

Get rid of parking meters

Two weeks ago Randwick Council continued its decision to implement parking meters across our fair city.

All 15 councillors agreed that “carrot” exemption stickers for residents and ratepayers would make everyone happy. However, last year 39,417 residents, ratepayers and visitors said no to parking meters in a citywide petition.

Even with the offer of the “carrot”, the residents, ratepayers and visitors of this city are still vehemently saying no, no, no to parking meters. Is that loud enough for the council to hear yet?

We say no to parking meters. They are a form of visual pollution and if they are to be revenue-neutral, can the council just put out cardboard cut-out ones or even ones that look like garden gnomes, because we do not want them outside our homes!
